ACCESSIBLE MOVIES: Several technologies have been developed over the years to make movies accessible for people with vision or hearing disabilities. They include:

The National Center for Accessible Media (<http://ncam.wgbh.org/>) is a research and development facility dedicated to addressing barriers to media and emerging technologies for people with disabilities in their homes, schools, workplaces, and communities. NCAM is part of the Media Access Group at WGBH, a Boston public broadcasting agency which includes two production units, The Caption Center (est. 1972) and Descriptive Video Service® (DVS®) (est. 1990). They developed:

Rear Window® Captioning displays reversed captions on a light-emitting diode (LED) text display which is mounted in the rear of a theater. Patrons who are deaf or hard-of-hearing use transparent acrylic panels attached to their seats to reflect the captions so they appear superimposed on the movie screen. The reflective panels are portable and adjustable, enabling the caption user to sit anywhere in the theater without bothering patrons in surrounding seats.

DVS Theatrical® presents concise descriptive narration of visual cues, including actions, settings, scene changes, facial expressions and silent movement, through an FM or infrared system, making movies more meaningful to people with vision loss. The moviegoer hears the narration on a headset without disturbing other audience members and at no extra cost.

Other systems have also been developed to use Open Captioning, which is a text display of words and sounds heard during a performance, film, video, speech or dialogue. The display is “open” for anyone to see in a particular seating area.

Information about the Motion Picture Access (MoPix) technology developed by the Media Access Group at WGBH is available at 617-300-3400; access@wgbh.org or <http://ncam.wgbh.org/mopix/>.

Captionfish is a website that lists cinemas with access features. Put in your zip code and the site will give current listings of nearby movies with open or closed captioning, an audio description track, or English subtitles in foreign films. Go to <http://www.captionfish.com>.

The Heights Theater: 3951 Central Ave. NE, Columbia Heights, <http://www.heightstheater.com>, box office: 763-789-4992. It specializes in upscale first-run films, classic film series and events, and a free e-mail newsletter is available. The venue is accessible but does not offer hearing devices or closed captioning of films.

Landmark Theatres: Three cinemas in Minneapolis and Edina offer CaptiView Closed Caption Viewing Systems, which allow people with hearing loss to read movie dialogue from the comfort of their seat anywhere in the auditorium; IR Technology, which enhances film content with amplified sound by using infrared light to transmit audio to your ears with an IR receiver and a headset; and Fidelio, a wireless audio system that delivers descriptive narration for people with vision loss and amplified sound for people with hearing loss. Patrons can get a compact audio receiver with a plug-in headset at the box office or bring their own headset. Descriptive Narration and Closed captioning availability is subject to the content made available from distributors. All films are available with amplified sound through Assisted Listening Devices (ALD). In addition, patrons who have hearing aids with T-Coils can link directly into the theatre sound system at the touch of a button on their hearing aid using Hearing Loops, an induction loop system which magnetically transmits the auditorium sound to give a clear sound free from background noise and without requiring a headset.

Marcus Theatres in the Twin Cities, St. Cloud and Duluth: CaptiView (closed captioning) technology for guests who are deaf and hard of hearing can be used at any showing for movies that are captioned using this technology. When buying a ticket, request the CaptiView device (about the size of a large smartphone with a screen to display the captions). Its flexible support arm fits into the cupholder of the guest's seat, and the viewing angle can be adjusted. Patrons can also request assistive listening devices (wireless headphones with adjustable volume) at the box office at all film showings. Guests with vision loss can use these headphones as descriptive audio devices when a movie offers a descriptive audio option. Not all films are produced this way.
